Birmingham, July 11th 1877

My dear Sir, I have now the 189 pleasure of sending you the Address which was informally presented to you on Saturday night.
It had not then the signatures of the officers of our Union appended; they are now affixed.

I hope you had a comfortable journey on Monday, reached your destination safely. I only wish you could have stayed here longer, there are so many of my friends to whom I should like to have given the pleasure of an introduction to you.

But though I should like to have done more, your visit has been a great event to us, & will be always remembered with happiness.

With very kind remembrance to your son. Believe me, dear Sir,

Yours sincerely

R. F. Mantuan
